

Anabella – Week 6

This week was a great week! Work was slow this but it went by so fast! The annual Director's meeting was held in DC and I was able to attend the workshops and help out with the presentations. I was also able to meet other Directors from across the U.S. and I thought that was really neat. I was able to see my Director and tagged along on the Capitol Hill visits. During the visit, I got to go into my office and have a meeting with one of the Legislative Assistants I work with and advocate for the CAMP program. On the last day of the Director's meeting, all of the current interns and some of the old, went out for dinner with the Patrick and the rest of the directors. After seeing my Director, I've realized how close home seems and I'm starting to count down the days until I get to see all my wonderful friends and Family. This week, I was able to go to the Holocaust Museum where I spent the entire day to make sure I didn't miss a thing. I also went to the Air and Space Museum, the National History Museum, and I took a tour of the Washington Monument.
